

AUTOPOIETIC SYSTEMS

- Society is the encompassing social system which includes all communications.
- Luhmann suggested that a society should be characterized by its primary mode of internal differentiation: the way in which a system builds sub-systems, i.e., the difference of systems and (internal) environments within itself.
- Forms of differentiation determine the degree of complexity a society can attain.

SOCIETIES AND INTERACTIONS

