

agency

IDENTITY AND CONTROL

- This control is not necessarily about dominance as much as a finding a space for ourselves to exert some agency.
- Our perceived normal lives are actually made up of constant, “turbulent efforts at control” among identities.
- Thus, society is inevitably a combination of chaos and normality.

NETDOMS

