

institutionalizing

incorporate

own actions

reciprocal

INSTITUTIONALIZED

- It takes only 2 people to begin the process of institutionalizing behavior.
- Think of two people from completely different societies meeting.
- They each interpret the other's behavior and, eventually, begin to incorporate this behavior into their own actions.
- This reciprocal witnessing, interpreting, and performing of each other's behavior ultimately creates the habits that can eventually form an institution (though more people are required in order to create typologies or classifications among actors).

WHAT BECOMES "HABIT"

