BOUNDARY WORK

- This boundary work creates social and culture capital, resources specific to social stratification.
- Social capital: when social connections increase one's resources (e.g., getting a job thanks to family, friends, a university alumni network, etc.)
- Cultural capital: knowledge that gives people an edge in social settings, rather than in production lines (e.g., sophisticated language, multilingualism, rarified knowledge)
- Groups with high social capital tend to hoard it amongst themselves (think of exclusive clubs),
