

STRUCTURE OF HUMAN SOCIETY

Capital and Superstructure

- The superstructure of society consists of the sum total of the relations of production (i.e., raw materials, labor, and technology) and those who control production (i.e., capitalists).
- Capital involves the social relationship between buyers and sellers of labor power.

Capital and Superstructure

