

THE CIVILIZING PROCESS

- He asserts that “the basic tissue resulting from many single plans and actions of men can give rise to changes and patterns that no individual person has planned or created.”
- In other words, it’s not helpful to use dichotomies such as rational and irrational to explain civilization.
- What kind of behaviors and situations produce what we know as “civilized” behavior?

The civilising process

CONTENT

4. on behavior at table
5. behavioral codes surrounding urinating and defecating
6. on blowing one's nose
7. on spitting
8. on behavior in the bedroom
9. on changes in attitudes towards relations between men and women
10. on changes in aggressiveness

