

commitment

commitment shapes identity

salience shapes role choice behavior

IDENTITY SALIENCE

- In place of society, identity theorists introduced the concept of commitment, or “the degree to which persons’ relationships to others in their networks depend on possessing a particular identity and role.”
- So, Mead’s “society shapes self shapes social behavior” becomes “commitment shapes identity salience shapes role choice behavior.”

INTERNAL MECHANISMS

