

Structuration

- Giddens focuses on what he sees as aspects that current theories of agency miss, specifically time.
- Agency is "a continuous flow of conduct."
- In other words, time isn't separate chunks so much as a sea of flowing moments stitched seamlessly together.

Structuration

