

TAXIS AND COSMOS

- Rather, complex societies resulted from a series of rules followed by the individuals within the various organizations that comprise complex civilizations.
- Of the many possible “made” orders within society, government is perhaps the most essential, since it is the institution that enforces rules.
- In “made” orders, rules only exist as subsidiaries to commands. By contrast, rules in “spontaneous” orders are independent of purpose.

LUHMANN AND DIFFERENTIATION